

A FACEBALL PRIMER FOR THE MEMORY DEFICIENT

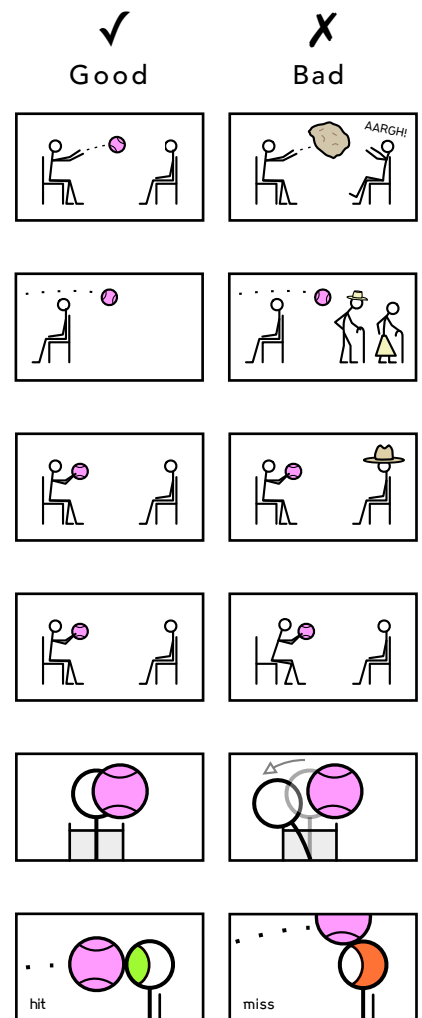

THE BASIC IDEA Two people sit 10 feet apart. They take turns throwing a beachball aimed at their opponent's face. Each hit to the face earns a point and the right to shoot again. The player with the most points after 5 rounds is the winner. Tied games are decided by a shoot out.

EQUIPMENT 2 players / 2 chairs / At least 1 beachball / Pen and paper / Something to measure 10 feet (304.8cm).

RULES Everyone hates rules, but if you don't follow these, there's a very good chance you could lose a nose or an eye.

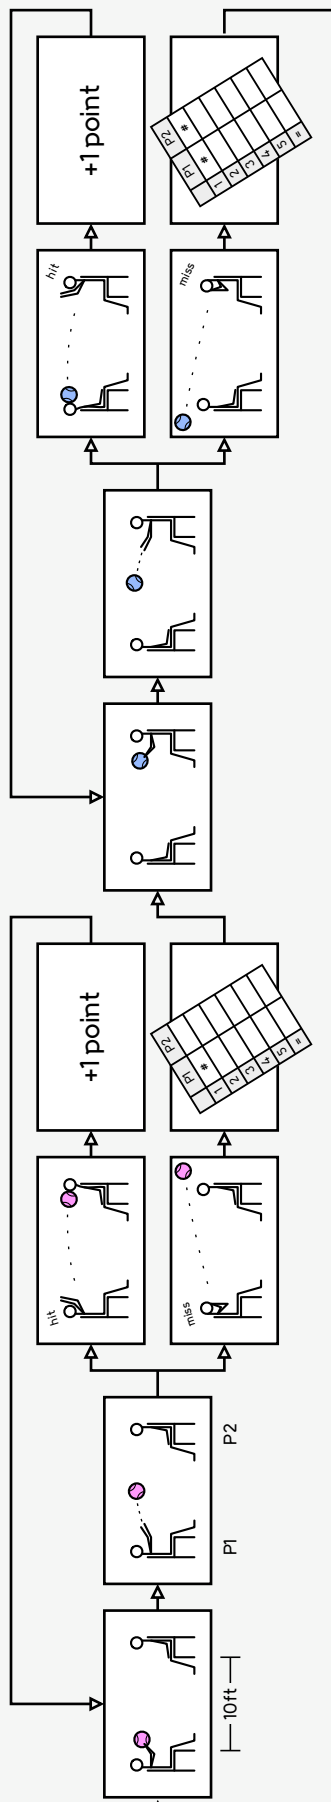

- Don't use heavy or hard balls that might injure yourself or others.
- Don't play near anything breakable, such as a china cabinet or someone with osteoporosis.
- Remove glasses and hats before playing. (You shouldn't be wearing a hat indoors anyway.)
- Do not lean excessively when shooting. Try to keep your bottom near the back of the chair.
- No dodging or ducking. Keep your head as still as possible when your opponent shoots.
- Only clean hits to the face result in a score. Glancing blows or hair-whiffs count as a miss.

DISCLAIMER Faceball.org is the personal site of John Allspaw and Dunstan Orchard. We do not have the powers of Uri Gellar. We do not have the ability to bend spoons. Nor do we have the ability to control your brain. We are not making you play this game. We are not making your friends play this game. If you do play and something awful happens, it is your own fault. Or maybe your friends' fault. In fact, maybe you should spend less time trying to sue us and more time finding smarter friends. Because frankly, they're an embarrassment.
